YENTERDAY afternoon an intoxicated man met two little girls on Second South street as they were going home from school. He gave them some change and finally induced one of them to start up Plum alley with him. The other girl ran up the street and thus attracted attention to the man. Officers Birkner and Peole started up the alley, and the fellow ran off and escaped. This incident gave rise to sensational rumors in regard to a kidnapping case.

There is evidence of a tremendous convulsion of the forces of nature, in which the rocks show crevices running down to unknown depths. Judgment Set Aside and the Case Remanded.

WHERE JUDGE BLACKBURN ERRED

Refusal of Requests of the Defense Had a Tendency to Preindice the Minds of the Jury.

The Hancock case is one of the most re markable ever tried in a court of justice in Utah; the verdict was a surprise to a great Utah; the verdict was a surprise to a great many, and the belief was widespread that if the facts ever were presented to the supreme court a new trial would be granted.

woodey's artist will continue to set these pictures in a continuation of such pictures from week to week, and they will be found well worth a visit from the admirers of the artistic and beautiful. This opinion was verified yesterday when Judge Miner read the decision arrived at. George W. Hancock was indicted with two others for the murder of Henry Jones on April 24, 1858. The indictment was found in March, 1890, and the defendant was tried separately in the district court at Provo and found fullty of murder in the second degree. A motion for a new trial was overruled by Judge Blackburn. The opinion yesterday was delivered by Judge Miner, Judges Zane and Anderson concurring. It reviews the evidence, which appeared in The Herald at the time of the trial, at great length. It appears that Henry Jones was living with his mother, his brother John Jones and his sister Ellien H. Brown in a dugout near Payson.

AT THE TIME OF THE KILLING. the girl was but five years old. She testified that on the evening of the killing there was shooting on the outside of the dugout, and the Jones coys climbed through the chimney into the hut. Then a crowd of men came in and killed Mrs. Jones. Henry Lones was firmed. of men came in and killed Mrs. Jones, Henry Jones was afterwards captured by the mob near Pond Town, and on the way back to Payson was shot and killed. It was also shown that prior to the killing, Hancock, who was a constable, had borne a good character; also that a long time a root to the killing. Jones was castrated pror to the killing. Jones was castrated prior to the killing Jones was castrated, but the defendant was not shown to have had any compileity in that act.

The defense assigned twelve errors as grounds for a reversal of the judgment of conviction. It was claimed that

As to the first error assigned, Judge Miner said: "In the course of the trial it appears by the testimony of Henry Gardner, under objection from the defendant's counsel, that Henry Jones had been castrated some considerable time before the alleged homicide. It nowhere appears that the defendant had any hand or complicity in this transaction. n this transaction, or was in any manne Stanley, 4,000 ft 25c.

The calls of the stock exchange are held in the basement of the Opera House block on West Second South street, from 11 a.m. to 12 blc. Colonel J. T. At the workings there is a peculiar formation, that is attracting a good deal of comment from anything heretofore seen in the camp. There is evidence of a tremendous convulsion of the forces of inture, in which it was decided to push the work as rapidly as possible. Colonel J. T. The presumption is that this testimony was admitted for the purpose of showing malice on the part of the defendant, and the learned judge admitted this testimony. If this be so, the prosecution failed in any way tends to elucidate the question in any way te chargeable therewith, or that that fact in out so clear that no good character can make them doubtful; but there may be others in which evidence given against a person without character would amount to a conviction, in which a high character would produce a reasonable doubt which high character will actually out-weigh evidence which otherwise might ap-pear conclusive. "Good character is an important factor with every man, and never more so than when he is put on trial charged with an offense which is rendered improbable in the least degree by a uni-form course of life wholly inconsistent with any such crime. There are cases where it becomes

A MAN'S SOLE DEPENDENCE, and yet may prove sufficient to outweigh evidence of the most positive character. The most clear and convincing cases are sometimes satisfactorily rebutted by it, and a life of unblemished integrity becomes a complete shield of protection against the nost skilful web of susplcion and fasebood which conspirators have been abla which conspirators have been able to weave. Good character may not only raise a doubt of guilt which would not otherwise exist, but it may bring conviction of inno-cence. In every criminal trial it is a fact which the defendant is at liberty to put in evidence; and, being in, the jury have a right to give it such weight as they take it entitled to."

The court also instructed the jury as follows: "The length of time that has elapsed since the murder that is charged was comsince the murder that is charged was committed and the commencement of the prose-cution is not to be considered at all. It is not an element to determine the guilt or innocence of this party, one way or another. Time does not run against the murderer or in his favor. This charge was possibly given under a mistake of fact. We think it had

A TENDENCY TO MISLEAD THE JURY, and that from it they might infer that the and that from it they might inter that the opinion of the court was as to the identity of the murderer, the degree of the offense and the guilt of the defendant. This homicide was committed thirty-two years ago, and when we consider that the witness Ellen Brown was only five years of age at that they and that other witnesses had that time, and that other witnesses had grown old and possibly forgetful with in creasing age, we cannot conclude that the length of time that has elapsed since the homicide should not be a strong circumstance to enter into the consideration of the jury in testing the truthfulness, forgetfulness, candor or bias of those left to relate the circumstances of this alleged murder, and as bearing upon the probabilities of the guilt or innocence of the accused.

Hopt vs. People, 110 U. S., 574.

For the reason stated the verdict and judgment of the court below should be set aside and a new trial granted.

A GLIMPSE AT A PALACE.

Dinwoodey's Two Mammoth Windows and What They Hold.

When Dinwoodey's palatial furniture house went up, there was some wonderment over the extraordinary size of the front windows, which were built large enough to allow half a dozen double teams enter without hindrance. Mr. Dinwoodey's aim is now made evi ent. Each week, or oftener, one of his decorators—a man who might be called an artist—takes from the superb stock within an article here and there all over the store and constructs a brilliant salon within the windows, all the brilliant materials, furniture, carpets, drameries, hangings, misses together with a taste and elegance never seen in any apartment outside of an actuat palace. At a giance, therefore, the beholder is enabled to see a sort of index to what the mammoth store contains. The display which has been seen in the east window during the week past rather caps all previous exhibitions in magnificence, and has drawn many admiring eyes, especially from lady passers by. The value of the goods displayed in that window alone was about $2,000—it was an artistic arrangement of chenille curtains, fitty-inch plush curtains, lace curtains of real Brussels, points Rennaissance and Irish points, so as to form a gorgeous set of apartments; a set of the most dainty and exquisite brocatille furniture adorned one end, and a dark library set the other; the curtains were trimmed with tinselled edgings, cords, loops and dados; a great silver piano lamp and a pair of handsome bronzes set off the other furnishings; altogether it was a picture of oriental splendor. Mr. Dinwoodey's artist will continue to set these pictures in a continuation of such pictures from week to week, and they will be found

NATHAN, CLOTI Hember of the taking and selling of said property, on the ground that the taxes were fllegal for the reason that the taxes were filegal for the reason that the property levied upon was not hable to taxtion for city purposes, being situated outside the platted and settled portions of the city and so remote thereform as to receive no benefit from the expenditure of the taxes for municipal purposes. The defendant, by his answer admitted the seizure and sale of the plantiff's property as alleged, but claimed that the taxes for which it was taken were legal. The cause was tried by the court S. J. that the taxes for which it was taken were legal. The cause was tried by the court without a jury upon an agreed statement of facts. The court held the tax invalid and gave judgment in favor of the plaintiff for $50 and costs, and the defendant brings the appeal from said judgment. From a plat of the city showing its corporate limits, the platted and settled portion thereof and the location of plaintiff's premises, which plat is made a part of the record and from the agreed statement of facts it appears that the property of plaintiff on a said so located the Misseln.

Under the head "An Anxious Mother," this notice appeared in the Ogden Commercial of January 31. "Some time ago Ralph H. Pierce, of Trace, lowa, came west to work on the Union Pacific from Lima to limits, the platted and settled portion in his head and was brought to the Union in his head and was brought to the Union the hospital, where he became de appears that the property of plaintiff on and from the agreed statement of facts it appears that the property of plaintiff on which the taxes were levied, and on which he resides consists of three tracts of land used for farming purposes, and a store, all within the corporate limits of the city. One tract is situated alittle over a half a mile from the nearest part of the platted portion of the city. The second tract is situated about one mile and the third tract about two miles from the platted portion of the city, while the store is situated about two miles from the platted portion of the city while the store is situated about two miles away at a little place called Layton on a county road leading to the city proper, and also on the line of the Union Pacific railroad. This so called city is only a small village containing only about six hundred inhabitants in the platted portion thereof, and yet its corporate limits include more than twenty-three square miles. It is not shown that the platted portion, or what may be termed the city proper, is likely to be extended in the direction of plaintiff's premises, nor that any streets, driveways or other improvements in that direction are contemplated or at all probable; nor is it shown that the plaintiff will or can derive any benefit from the extended in the direction of plaintiff will or can derive any benefit from the expenditure of this former associates, and came here to the corporate limits include more than twenty-three square miles. It is not shown that the plaintiff will or can derive any benefit from the agreed to the fact.

Of castration. This, we think, was error. The only object for its admission, if it was admissable at all, would be to show that the defendant committed the act, or assisted in its commission, and that he must have had malice against the deceased at that time; and when the prosecution failed to connect the defendant with the act, the testimony becomes, wholly incompetent. Its admission, under the circumstances, would naturally

TEND TO AWAKEN A PREJUDICE in the minds of the jury against the defendant. Testimony of this transaction was foreign to the issue and should not have been allowed."

The decision holds that the requests of the defense for instructions as to character should have been granted and the instruction given was erroneous. On this subject the opinion says: It is in clear cases therefore where evidence of good character is of the mostavail. There may be cases made out so clear that no good character can make them doubtful; but there may be cheered in the defendant of the supreme court. The Congress of the defendant of the instruction of the instru are contemplated or at all probable; nor is it shown that the plaintiff will or can derive any benefit from the expenditure of these taxes, except in that general sort of way in which it may be said that all persons residing in the country are benefitted by good streets, sidewalks, etc. in the town or city where they usually go to transact their business. Notice of an appeal to the supreme court of the United States was given.

In the case of Annie Marks et al. vs. W. H. Quimer et al., in which the defendants appealed from the ruling of the district court disallowing items in the cash bill, Judge Anderson read the opinion of the court sustaining the ruling of the court below.

BLACKBURN SUSTAINED.

In the case of the People vs. James Chadwick and Edward Whipple, Judge Miner delivered the opinion of the court.
The defendants were indicted in March,
1889, charging them with the larceny of a
cow. They were convicted in September, 1890, and Judge Blackburn overruled the motion for a new trial. The supreme court sustained that order.

THE CASE REMANDED. In the case of J. M. Easton, appellant, vs. Herman Thatcher et al., respondents, in-volving the titles to some ranch land, the judgment of the district court was reversed and the case remanded.

SUBMITTED. The case of Sarah J. Weaver vs. David

Weaver was submitted. The case of Spanish Fork city vs. Zacheriah Hopper was submitted on briefs. SPECIAL SALE This week we will sell muslin underwear
